

THE HERALD

SPENCER COOPER, : : : : Editor.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.
THURSDAY, Nov. 22, 1894.

The late election in Tennessee will teach several lessons to a good many people on both sides.

The state penitentiary warehouse suffered a $26,000 loss by fire recently. Partially covered by insurance.

The syndicate that is trying to corner silver will probably find that it has a white elephant as well as a white metal on its hands.

Madisonville wants a whipping post for the chicken thieves, wife beaters and petty law breakers. The Hustler advocates the inauguration of such a method of punishment.

We presume that free silver and anti-options will be dead issues for some time to come now, as both Bland and Hatch, the high priests respectively of these two fads, have been repudiated by their constituents.

The latest advices from Knott county says that Kendall has carried it by 233 majority over Hopkins, and that Beckner's majority is over 300. If this report be true, Kendall's majority in the district is 202.

It has been reported recently that there has been, and is, quite an epidemic of fever in Kentucky university, at Lexington, but we are reliably informed that there have been only about twelve cases—none serious. Why such reports are so grossly exaggerated we cannot tell.

President Cleveland, in a statement for publication, puts at rest any doubt as to the relations between himself and Secretary Carlisle. He dismisses the rumors as a "batch of silly misstatements," and says that he and the secretary are in thorough accord upon the subject of the bond issue and all other official questions. He expresses warm esteem for the secretary and high appreciation of his services.

If the Democrats of Kentucky expect to elect men of their political faith to either county, district or state offices, they must teach the Democratic committees that it is their duty to try to secure elections instead of nominations. The county committees in several counties in this state have played the devil with Democracy by working to secure the nomination of their pets, thus killing their influence at the regular election.—Montgomery Times.

The silver senators who are counting on splitting the Republican party two years hence should not be over-confident. It is possible to beat the Republican party sometimes, but very hard to split it. Republicans usually stand together, whether it is to elect a rascal to office, like the present governor of Iowa; to do the bidding of a boss, like Platt, or to swallow any principle, or perversion of principle, which the party pill-pounders may prescribe.

INTERVIEW WITH JUDGE BECKNER.

Henry L. Godsey, of Hazel Green, Will Be His Secretary.

In a chat with Judge Beckner the other day we asked him what he thought had caused the great change in public sentiment as evidenced by the recent elections.

"Chiefly hard times," he replied. "Two years ago the Republicans were defeated in great part for the same cause. A man is sick with a fever which must run its course. It might have been broken up probably, or checked at the beginning, but the family physician failed to do this, or perhaps pursued a policy which aggravated the disease. A new doctor is called in. He tries his hand and fails, of course, because the fever must run its course. The patient is restless and turns him off and calls back the old doctor, whose incompetence or negligence, perhaps, allowed the disease to get a headway. This very nearly illustrates the situation. Before the Democrats had time to effect the cure, which their policy would surely bring, the people got tired waiting and turned them off. They will be called for again, because the Republicans will do as they always have done, and then the people will be sorry they trusted them another time. Some did not like the squabbles of the Democratic leaders, forgetting that the Republicans did the same way. Others thought that congress had not gone far enough in the matter of tariff reform. Still others were scared lest it had gone too far. Such has been the history of all movements towards the light. Two steps forward and one backward, and sometimes a panicky retreat which seems a destruction of all hope. But truth comes again, and no fight for freedom was ever finally lost. China has held on to the Republican policy longer than any other country ever did, but its day of deliverance seems to be at hand. The bank panic of 1893, the great strikes of last summer when Federal soldiers were called in, the A. P. A. and other causes have helped to give the Republicans a temporary victory. The people always return, however, to the Democratic party, because its principles are the foundation stones of the republic, and however weak its leaders may sometimes be, yet its policies are those on which all men must rely for securing equal rights to all and exclusive privileges to none. I am not uneasy about the outcome."

"How do you account for the handsome majority in Clark when there were so many slumps elsewhere?"

"Why, of course it results from the zeal and activity of the boys. There was never a better county chairman than Frank Pendleton. He has tireless energy, a quick perception, dauntless courage and a devotion to Democracy which stirs him to do whatever he can. His enthusiasm inspires others, and besides he is practical, and knows how to manage the details of a campaign."

"Everywhere I hear praises of speeches made by Mayor Garner, D. H. Goyen, E. S. Jouett, Captain Tracy, Sam Jeffries, Owen Fitch and others. But throughout the whole canvass could be felt the force of Judge Rodney Haggard's unceasing work and intelligent appreciation of the situation. The candidates all did well, and so did the boys who were defeated in the primary. They behaved like true men, as they are. Look at Sam Jeffries! You would have thought it was his race instead of his having been a beaten aspirant. Such devotion to principle as we had in Clark convinces me that the state is as safe as ever with a similar canvass."

"Judge, you were lucky in the district."

"Yes. I felt from the beginning that the current was against us, and gave my whole time and all the energy I had to the contest. I canvassed every county, and tried to show the people that the Democratic party was not responsible for the hard times, and that its policy was the best for them. I took no radical or extreme position, explained things just as they are, and treated the other side fairly."

"Have you any particular measures that you intend to take an interest in whilst in congress?"

"No. The term is too short for me to hope to do much in that line. A new member does not get much consideration in such a body during so brief a service. I would like very much to go over the postal service of the district, and see that the people have their mails delivered punctually and at convenient places. There are a number of claims of one kind or another that my constituents have in Washington that I think I can be useful in pushing. I do not flatter myself that I am big enough to spread all over the country, but I can represent our district, and will try faithfully to serve its local interests. If anybody wants a post office changed or established, or a claim of any kind looked after, I hope they will write to me at Washington."

"Who will be your secretary?"

"Henry L. Godsey, of Hazel Green. He was with Mr. Lisle, and is a bright, smart fellow, whom I am glad to serve. Of course I would have been glad to have had my son with me, but other parts of the district have claims which ought to be recognized."—Winchester Democrat.

FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

The free and unlimited coinage of silver, the product of American mines, at the old ratio of 16 of silver to 1 of gold, is the only solution of and remedy for the disturbed and unsatisfactory condition of trade, manufacture and general business of the country. The surreptitious act of 1873, divorcing silver and gold in our monetary system, was a crime of untold magnitude. It was the rankest kind of class legislation in favor of the wealthy against the producers of wealth, and hostile to the prosperity of the United States. It was an act of treason because done at the instance of a European syndicate and for bribe money, "giving aid and comfort to our country's enemies." To shield the guilty parties, the well authenticated facts, often published, have been vigorously denied.

The Enquirer will continue to expose this unpardonable crime until right and justice are done the people by the full restoration of silver to its old companionship with gold. We need the assistance of the people in disseminating the truth, to which end we invite all in your selection of papers for the coming season to include the Enquirer, that costs only $1.00 a year.
